A Letter From the Chair

This annual report gives us the opportunity to recognize and thank you – our donors – for becoming our partners in improving the health of our community.

Please take a few minutes to read about how:

• Together, we are helping cancer patients shoulder the financial burdens that often come with this life-changing diagnosis.
• Through the generous lead gift from the Gettysburg Hospital Auxiliary, a new healing garden will bring comfort and tranquility to WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital patients and their families.
• We are helping to grow a healthy eating program for families who often can’t afford fresh fruits and vegetables.

These programs are proof positive that Gettysburg Hospital Foundation is meeting its goal of inspiring gifts and grants to support the important work of WellSpan Health in Adams County and adjacent communities in northern Maryland.

Thank you for your support. In 2013 we saw great initiatives like those featured in this annual report and many others continue or start because of the generosity of our community. We are fortunate to have a community filled with giving individuals, companies and organizations. Each and every one of you listed in this report has positively impacted thousands of lives over the past year.

I think our community is one in which people care enough about others – often people they don’t know and probably will never meet – to help them in a time of need. I am proud to be a member of this community and a member of Gettysburg Hospital Foundation’s Board of Directors.

Yours Truly,

Daniel M. Bringman
Chair, Board of Directors

Help Fund Allows Patients with Cancer to Focus on Healing

Non-profit organizations work hard to keep administrative costs to a minimum so they can spend a larger portion of their funds helping those they support. For WellSpan’s Adams County Cancer Patient Help Fund, that’s not an issue.

“One hundred percent of our donations come from the local community, and 100 percent of our donations are used to assist patients,” says Peggy Tilton, financial coordinator of the fund.

According to Michelle Shriner, nurse navigator at the Adams Cancer Center, an average of 12 families each month receive approximately $5,000 in financial assistance from the Cancer Patient Help Fund.

“The main purpose of the fund is to help people with daily living expenses – it’s not really for medical bills but for things like utility bills, rent and food,” says Shriner. “It’s meant to take financial pressure off of patients and their families so they can focus on healing during cancer treatment.”

As a nurse navigator, Shriner is responsible for helping people through the cancer treatment process – from diagnosis through survivorship. Since she is in direct contact with patients from the beginning of their journeys, Shriner identifies those who have financial need, assists them with the required paperwork and then refers them to Tilton.

“One of the reasons we started the fund is that we covered every other aspect of cancer care in Adams County but we saw this need and we had nothing filling it. Now we can completely take care of a patient and their family right here at home,” says Shriner.
A Way to Accomplish Our Mutual Goal to Support Patients with Cancer

WellSpan’s Cancer Patient Help Fund started in 1995, but it wasn’t until 2007 that it was split into two separate funds – one for York County and one for Adams County. According to Shriner, this has had a positive impact on individuals and organizations donating to the fund.

“Adams County is a relatively small, rural area,” she says. “People like donating to help others who live and work in their own community.”

When the Hanover Home Association, a privately owned social club founded in the 1930s, was looking for a place to contribute profits from their fund raisers, it was their board secretary, Sherri Small, who led them to the Adams County Cancer Patient Help Fund. The executive assistant to the president of WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital, Small reached out to the Gettysburg Hospital Foundation looking for suggestions on where to contribute.

“The Foundation supplied me with two different funds that we could contribute to – the Cancer Patient Help Fund and the Children’s Help Fund,” says Small, who then presented the information to the Hanover Home Association Board. “The Board voted to donate to both funds, and we were able to give $10,000 to each last year.”

Shriner explains that it is common for individuals who have been helped by the fund to later give back once they are on their feet again. People often donate in honor of a friend or loved one, organize events to raise money for the fund, or simply make donations because the fund helped them or someone they know in a time of need.

“It really impacts their family when they need it most so they want to contribute,” says Shriner.

Healing Garden Will Nourish the Spirit

Thanks in large part to a $50,000 pledged donation from the Gettysburg Hospital Auxiliary, plans are moving forward for a new healing garden on the WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital campus.

“Over the years, the Auxiliary’s invaluable support has allowed us to create a number of patient-centric areas at the hospital – areas that help us to improve the health of our community,” says Jane Hyde, president of WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital. “The Auxiliary’s latest pledge is much appreciated because it will help us to move more rapidly with our healing garden project.”

According to Hyde, the garden will be a space where patients, visitors and employees can spend quiet, reflective time and renew their spirits as they deal with health challenges or stress. This supports the hospital’s continual focus on the patient experience and commitment to wellness.

A Garden That Helps More Than Plants Flourish

The term “healing garden” frequently applies to green spaces in facilities that aim to improve health outcomes and provide a refuge for patients, families and staff. Gardens provide comfort, inspire strength, reduce stress and promote a sense of well-being.

Studies have shown that people who spend time in healing gardens report therapeutic benefits. Employees say they are more productive; patients feel better and have more tolerance for their medical procedures; and visitors find relief from the stress of a hospital visit.

WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital’s Healing Garden will be located near the emergency department, just outside of the first-floor imaging department waiting area. This placement means that visitors and staff can enjoy the beauty of the garden from both inside and outside the hospital.
“The space will be very private and self-contained,” says Judy Alder, manager of community philanthropy for the Gettysburg Hospital Foundation. “The whole area will be transformed with new trees, perennials, landscaping, a paved walkway and benches. It will provide a space for quiet conversation and reflection.”

Plans for the garden are already underway and construction is set to begin in the fall of 2014. Once started, the project should be complete within months. A dedication ceremony will be held to thank those who have donated to the garden, particularly the Auxiliary, but also individuals, families and organizations who purchase named features, such as a brick, a tree or a bench in honor of or in memory of a loved one.

Thank You

The 2014 Gettysburg Hospital Auxiliary Spirit of Hope Gala supported the Healing Garden. In addition to people who purchased tickets and auction items, we thank the following generous sponsors.

A Legacy of Support

The Gettysburg Hospital Auxiliary has been supporting the hospital in various capacities for 94 years. In the beginning, Auxiliary members would support the hospital by performing tasks, such as tearing up strips of cloth to make bandages. Over the years, the Auxiliary’s focus shifted to fund raising.

Today, the 300-person-strong Auxiliary raises approximately $30,000 annually for WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital and programs that support the community. Since its founding, the organization has donated more than $1 million to the hospital. Funds are raised through the hospital gift shop, a thrift shop in town, plant and book sales and an annual gala.
Closing the “Food Gap” one Family at a Time

One man’s garden weeds are another man’s salad. That’s what one farmer found out when a group of families toured his farm as part of the Healthy Options Program last summer.

“One farmer learned that he could sell something he thought was just a weed growing on his farm,” says Kathy Gaskin, executive director of Healthy Adams County, which oversees the program. According to Gaskin, a family touring the farm recognized the weed as purslane and said they would buy it if the farmer offered it at the local farmers’ market.

According to the Adams County Food Policy Council, 26 percent of county families with children are caught in the “food gap” – those who earn too much to qualify for food stamps, but not enough to shop nutritionally. The result is a diet of highly processed, unhealthy food.

Through the Healthy Options Program, families in need receive one $40 voucher each month to purchase fresh produce at local farmers’ markets. A $4,800 grant from the Gettysburg Hospital Foundation allowed the program to almost double the number of families it serves, from approximately 40 in 2012 to 74 in 2013.

The Healthy Options Program supports WellSpan Health’s commitment to wellness by giving families the opportunity to be involved in gardening classes, cooking classes, nutrition education, farm tours, food demonstrations and exercise programs.

“All of the various ways that Healthy Options can reach the community were very appealing to us,” says Jean LeGros, treasurer of the Gettysburg Hospital Foundation Board of Directors and a member of the grant review subcommittee. “Providing easy access to fresh, local produce really promotes healthy eating and healthy living, and the program benefits local produce growers. It was a win, win, win for the community.”

A Plan to Help Families Achieve Healthy Eating Goals

“Our goal is to get families to grow their own food eventually,” says Gaskin. “It’s more affordable, more sustainable, and families are able to eat healthier.”

The program aims to promote healthy eating to the entire family and also offers a children’s day at the local park and a health fair at local farmers’ markets.
“My son liked it,” reports one parent, referring to the children’s day at the farmers’ market. “We were really happy with him. He tried everything. He usually doesn’t eat many vegetables.”

As part of WellSpan Health’s commitment to improving the health of its communities – one person at a time – efforts are also under way to expand and improve the program.

“Next year we are going to invite families who have been with us for the past three years to act as team leaders,” explains Gaskin. “We hope they will take new families under their wings, contact them each week and help them get the most out of the program.”

The program’s success is measured not only by the increasing number of families being served, but also by experiences that families are reporting through research projects and surveys. Seven families were also given cameras and asked to document their experiences through the program. “I have learned how to make vegetables so that my children see them as good,” says one participant.

“When our board listened to a presentation about the program, it was just amazing to hear all of this – to document the impact this program is having on people’s lives. The participating families are cooking better, eating better and living healthier,” says LeGros.

In Her Own Words

“The Healthy Options Program has definitely changed the way we eat during the farmers’ market season,” says one mother who has been participating in the Healthy Options Program since it began in 2011.

“We’re able to buy more fruits and vegetables without worrying about using money that is meant for other bills. We love broccoli. That’s the number one vegetable my daughters like to eat.

“At one of our meetings I was introduced to pesto, which I love! It’s really good, and I didn’t know it was so easy to make.”

Many local families have benefited from the Healthy Options Program. For more information about the Healthy Options Program, please contact Healthy Adams County at (717) 337-4137.

Special Funds

The funds below are some of the special-purpose funds created by donors from our community to meet specific needs of our patients and families. The Gettysburg Hospital Foundation welcomes donors who wish to discuss creation of a special fund or how their giving can help grow an existing fund.

The Dr. Alan Carroll Lectureship for Nursing Excellence – Established by a grateful patient of Dr. Carroll in 2005 and supported by friends and employees of WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital, this fund provides educational lectureships and fosters the discussion of innovative ideas for the professional development of the nursing staff. Started with a gift of $5,000, the fund has grown to more than $50,000.

The WellSpan Adams County Cancer Patient Help Fund – Patients who are being treated for a cancer diagnosis often face not only the challenges of the disease but also financial challenges. This fund helps cancer patients pay expenses related to daily living, over and above any charity care provided by WellSpan. In 2013, nearly $60,000 was given to assist patients in need, providing funding for transportation to appointments, food, utilities, rent and other basic necessities.

The Esther Little Nursing Scholarship – Created by long-time supporter Esther Little, this fund awards a scholarship to a WellSpan staff person or volunteer who is pursuing or furthering a career in nursing. Alison Arrowood, RN, WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital Emergency Department, received the first scholarship awarded from the fund in 2013.
Cornerstone Society

The Gettysburg Hospital Foundation’s Cornerstone Society was established in 2004 to embody the hospital’s vision, honor its history and help ensure its future. To become a Cornerstone Society member, individuals make a commitment of $10,000 or more, payable over a period of 10 years. Through the Cornerstone Society, our valued donors become part of the legacy established when the hospital’s founders placed the original cornerstone in 1919. The Cornerstone Society provides resources to support the mission of WellSpan Gettysburg Hospital and continue a strong tradition of giving and community service.
